Description

The exotic looking flowers of the Arum lily (Zantedeschia aethiopica) make it a popular perennial plant for cut flowers. This easy to grow perennial bulb is also a great plant for a border or near a pond. They tolerate a wide range of growing conditions including boggy soils.

Their fleshy, arrow-shaped leaves and flowers can grow up to 3 ft high and the plant is quite fast growing if provided with the right conditions.

Callas come in many varieties and colors. The most common and hardiest one is Zantedeschia aethiopica with its white flowers. You will also find yellow, peach, pink or red varieties. The more compact mini calla lily bulbs (Little Gem , Perle von Stuttgart) are more suitable for smaller flower beds and containers.

Common name: snakeshead, adder s root, arum, wild arum, arum lily, lords-and-ladies, devils and angels, cows and bulls, cuckoo-pint, Adam and Eve, bobbins, naked girls, naked boys, starch-root, wake robin, friar s cowl and jack in the pulpit

Color: yellow, peach, pink, red and white

Bloom time: Late spring to midsummer

Height: Up to 3 feet

Difficulty level: Easy

Planting & Care

Sunlight: Full sun to partial shade

Soil: Arum lilies like a well drained but moist soil. They tolerate a pH range from 5.5 - 7.5.

Water: Your callas will start flowering during spring until the summer. During this time it is very important that you feed and water the plants regularly! Once the plants have finished flowering stop the feeding and watering. The arum lilies now enter their dormant phase.

Care:

- It is easy to grow arum lilies.
- These plants do not generally require too much attention.
- Proper planting and location are about the only important things to consider when growing arum lilies.
- Care of calla lilies requires that they be planted in loose, well-drained soil.

- They prefer to be located in full sun or partial shade in warmer climates.
- Calla lilies are typically planted in the spring.
- However, wait until the threat of frost has passed and the soil has warmed sufficiently before planting calla lilies.
- Arum lilies should be planted rather deep, about 4 inches for greater results, and spaced approximately a foot apart.
- Once planted, the area should be watered well.
- These lilies enjoy being kept moist and will also benefit from a monthly dose of fertilizer throughout the growing season.
