It is widely used as a houseplant. It does have pinnate leaves like a palm tree, but they are rounded and it has a thick tuberous stem. The evergreen leaflets grow in opposing pairs of up to 12 per a stem. The ZZ plant does produce small flowers at the base of the plant when it's grown in outdoors. The flower is a spathe type with a spadix. It is a low growing plant.

The trunk stores moisture in times of drought, which makes Zamia ideal for periscope gardens. They are able to thrive in areas with both low and high amounts of light. The ZZ plant removes Toluene and Xylene from indoor air.
