Description This old fashioned crinum lily is a low maintenance plant that produces lovely, large, striped, lily-like flowers. The stripes are alternately wine pink and white. The flowers also have a wonderful faintly sweet fragrance.

Common name: Crinum cochinchinense, Crinum longistylum, Crinum esquirolii

Color: purple

Bloom time: June-August.

Height: 18-24 inches

Difficulty level: easy to grow

Planting & Care

Getting a crinum to grow is easy, but getting it in the right location – from a landscape designing standpoint – is not. I'm saddened every time I drive by the Columbia Museum of Art, where a landscape architect put our crinum in deep shade. They're suffering.

Sunlight: Full Sun to Partial Shade

Soil: well-drained soil

Water: Medium

Temperature: (25 °F).

Fertilizer: Apply any organic fertilizer

Care:

- These gorgeous lilies occur naturally all over the world.
- There are dozens of American, African, and Asian species.
- Some crinums grow in deserts while others grow completely underwater.

Special Feature:

These will produce several flower stalks during the warmer months with the majority of blooms coming in the spring and fall. These lilies will multiply by producing bulbs underground as well as from the seeds that form after the blooms.

Use

Medicinal use:

- Medicinal uses: Warning: Unverified information Bulbs are extremely acid.
- When roasted, they are used as a rubefacient in rheumatism.
- Crushed and toasted bulb is applied to piles and abscesses to cause suppuration.
- The juice of the leaf is used in earache.

Ornamental use:

- The plant is used for ornamental purpose

Note:

for medicinal use, please consult appropriate doctor before use.
