Description

Description for Gaillardia

Blanket flowers are wonderfully cheerful, long-blooming plants for hot, sunny gardens. They produce single or double daisy flowers through most of the summer and well into fall. The daisy-like flowers are produced from early summer to early fall in shades of orange, red and yellow, adding sizzle to the garden and attracting nectar-seeking butterflies.

Common name	Flower colours	Bloom time	Height	Difficulty
Blanket Flower.	Orange, red and yellow.	Early summer to early fall.	24-30 inches.	Easy.

Planting and care

Plant Gaillardia x grandiflora any time after frost. Dig a hole twice the diameter of the pot the plant is in. Carefully remove the plant from its container and place it in the hole so the top of the root ball is level with the soil surface. Carefully fill in around the root ball and firm the soil gently. Water thoroughly.

Sunlight	Soil	Water	Temperature	Fertilizer
Full sun. They can handle some partial shade, particularly in hot climates, but they will get a bit floppy and will not flower as profusely.	Gaillardia is not particular about soil pH, but it does need a well-draining soil.	Water well until they are not established. Once established, occasional watering should become a part of blanket flowersâ€™™ care.	Gaillardia can be grown with temperatures of 65-70 F.	Apply an all-purpose slow release fertilizer on the soil every couple of months.

Caring for Gaillardia

Gaillardia x grandiflora does not require deadheading to keep blooming, but the plants will look better and be fuller if you do cut the stems back, when the flowers start to fade. You will also get more continuous flowering with deadheading.

Typical uses of Gaillardia

Special features:

Ornamental use: Gaillardia are such long bloomers, they work equally well in borders and containers. The bold flowers blend especially well with soft textures, like thread-leaf Coreopsis and cosmos, as well as airy grasses.
