Description

Description for Happy Ganesha with Senecio Herreianus

Leafy succulent, in that it store large amounts of water in their leaves (as opposed to stems as do the cacti) and can withstand long periods of drought. Leaves are football shaped and about 3/8 inch long.

The unique shapes of the fleshy leaves greatly reduce the surface area exposed to the hot and dry environment, so they lose a bare minimum of the precious water extracted from the soil.

In its natural environment its stems trail on the ground, rooting where they touch and forming dense mats.

Note: The selection of plant (size/color), pot design & Ganesha Idol design may vary depending on availability

Common name	Flower colours	Bloom time	Height	Difficulty

Bright, partial shade	Sandy soil	It requires very infrequent watering (about once a month).	Normal room temperature	-

Caring for Happy Ganesha with Senecio Herreianus

- Clean the ceramic pot with clean cloth regularly.

- Clean the load Ganesh idol once a month.
- Do not put extra water, water plant twice a week.
- Keep the set indoor, dust free environment.
- Keep the set away from children's reach.
- Allow the soil to dry out between waterings in the winter, when they are somewhat dormant. Since they are growing in sandy soil, nutrients will need to be replenished. Fertilize annually, but lightly. Too much fertilizer will cause a lot of leggy growth.
