Description

Description for Lemon Button Fern, Nephrolepis Cordifolia Duffii

Once it finds its place in your home, and you establish its care cycle, its pretty much care-free.

A small fern that grows to about a foot high and not much more across, it boasts tiny arching stems. Leaves are round with very small serrated edges that alternate up the stem.

When handled, theres a lemon scent, which in addition to its yellowish gold color gives the fern its name.

The Nephrolepis is the smallest of the Boston ferns and good for the beginning Indoor Gardener. The plant usually starts off in a small pot of no more than 4 inches, and never progresses much out of a 6to 8inch container.

Sunlight	Soil	Water	Temperature	Fertilizer
low, filtered shade; no direct afternoon sun	mix peat moss into potting soil; well draining	moderate, keep soil moist , dont let it dry out; don’t allow it to get soggy	60 F	spring-early fall, once per 3-4 weeks; liquid fertilizer, half strength

Caring for Lemon Button Fern

Give them plenty of organic matter when planting and don't crowd them. Wear sturdy gloves to protect your hands from prickly thorns. Have a hose or bucket of water and all your planting tools nearby. In its native habitat, it may grow to as much as 7 inch tall. It is an easy and popular fern to grow indoors.
