Description

Description for Chinnerinchee, Ornithogalum (Mix Colors)

The common name of the genus, Star-of-Bethlehem, is based on its star-shaped flowers. The genus Ornithogalum contains about 180 species.

The genus is characterized by long linear to oblong-lanceolate (lance-shaped) leaves.

The bulbs are ovoid with free or concrescent scales. These are white or off-white with green or brown shading in the centre, which fades over time. These flowers last a long time, once open, and bend towards the light. The leaves are fleshy and sword-shaped, and the only number about six per stalk. They feel soft and smooth to the touch.
